Assignment of Copyright

Title of Article:

To be completed by the copyright holder:

I attest that I am the author of this material and that it is an original work not previously published in whole or in substantial part; that it is free of plagiarism; and that I have exercised reasonable care to ensure that the material is not inaccurate, libelous, or obscene and that it does not infringe on any copyright, right of privacy, or any other right of any third party.

I hereby assign to the Business History Conference the copyright present and future in the above-named article for the legal term of the copyright, including all renewals or extensions in all languages throughout the world. The granting of copyright entitles the Business History Conference to publish the material in the Journal and to reproduce the article in any form or medium now or hereafter known throughout the world.

Notwithstanding this grant of rights, I retain the right to use the work I have submitted, without charges, in other publications written or edited by myself, provided that I acknowledge the Journal as the original place of publication and that the publisher, Oxford University Press, is notified of any republication (at the address above). I also retain the right to mount my article on my own personal World Wide Web home page and/or that of my employer's, provided that I (i) acknowledge the Journal as the original place of publication and the Business History Conference as the copyright holder and (ii) provide electronic links from my article to the publisher's home page for the Journal (<http://www.es.opjournals.org/>) and to the Business History Conference's web site (<http://www.eh.net/bhc/>).

If I am an employee of the U.S. government submitting a work of the U.S. government, insofar as I am able within the constraints of national law, I hereby assign the rights of the above-named article to the Business History Conference, according to the terms above.
